Iceland Clothing Guide (Prioritize warmth, windproofness, rainproofness, and lightweight clothing): Iceland has a high-latitude maritime climate with changeable weather and strong winds, especially in autumn and winter when storms and rain/snow are common, and the perceived temperature can drop rapidly to below freezing. To ensure a comfortable and safe trip, please be sure to prepare for full-body warmth and waterproofing. ① Clothing Recommendations: First layer: Base layer (lightweight thermal underwear or ski-drying inner layer); Second layer: Mid-layer (fleece jacket + lightweight down liner); Third layer: Outer protective layer (down jacket or waterproof/windproof soft/hardshell jacket, ski suit; Important: Outerwear must be windproof and waterproof, and allow for ample layering space. Brightly colored clothing looks better in Iceland.) ② Accessories (essential): Hat and scarf: to reduce head and neck chill; Gloves: essential for wind protection and warmth; Sunglasses/glasses: to reduce glare from snow and wind damage to the eyes. ③ Footwear:

	Mid- to high-top hiking boots are recommended: warm, waterproof, and slip-resistant, effectively protecting ankles. Avoid ordinary sneakers in winter to prevent water ingress or slipping on ice. 6. Swimsuit: Swimsuits are required for the Blue Lagoon. Some hotels offer free public hot tubs (similar to small hot springs). If you plan to use the hot springs, please bring your own swimsuit and flip-flops. 7. Our company arranges professional Mandarin-speaking tour guides to provide Chinese-language explanations and communication throughout the trip. However, the guides do not provide guided tours inside attractions. For some attractions, a paid guided tour by a licensed local guide is required, subject to the guide's on-site arrangements. 8. Most hotels in Iceland require you to bring your own toothbrush, toothpaste, and razor. The local adapter plug type is the European standard two-prong round plug. 9. Optional Activities: These are all personal activities. Please choose carefully based on your own circumstances; the company is not responsible for any liability or risk. Note: Optional activities in Iceland are subject to weather and other unforeseen circumstances and may not be able to proceed as scheduled. Actual arrangements will be based on the guide's assessment and the on-site safety conditions. Please understand and be aware of this. 10. Regarding optional activities in the Iceland itinerary: Registration is subject to on-site confirmation. Early registration does not guarantee success. Most local shops, restaurants, convenience stores, public transportation, and taxis accept credit card payments, including public restrooms. (If you have a credit card, you don't need to bring Icelandic Krona cash.) 13. You don't need to carry a large amount of cash. Excluding optional programs, 200-300 Euros per person is recommended (depending on your budget). 14. Icelandic specialties: Lobster bisque, Icelandic lamb soup, Skyr yogurt, Arctic salmon, seafood dishes, etc.; you can choose according to your personal taste. 15. We' ll continue our journey around Lake Mývatn, a place shaped by volcanic forces and teeming with birdlife. The lake is dotted with over 50 small islands, all created by volcanic activity. Then, we will head to Goðafoss, the 'Waterfall of the Gods.' Spanning in a horseshoe shape, this stunning waterfall is steeped in history, tied to Iceland' s shift to Christianity when idols were thrown into its powerful waters. Overnight in Akureyri or nearby.

5. Iceland Clothing Guide (Prioritize warmth, windproofness, rainproofness, and lightweight clothing): Iceland has a high-latitude maritime climate with changeable weather and strong winds, especially in autumn and winter when storms and rain/snow are common, and the perceived temperature can drop rapidly to below freezing. To ensure a comfortable and safe trip, please be sure to prepare for full-body warmth and waterproofing. ① Clothing Recommendations: First layer: Base layer (lightweight thermal underwear or ski-drying inner layer); Second layer: Mid-layer (fleece jacket + lightweight down liner); Third layer: Outer protective layer (down jacket or waterproof/windproof soft/hardshell jacket, ski suit; Important: Outerwear must be windproof and waterproof, and allow for ample layering space. Brightly colored clothing looks better in Iceland.) ② Accessories (essential): Hat and scarf: to reduce head and neck chill; Gloves: essential for wind protection and warmth; Sunglasses/glasses: to reduce glare from snow and wind damage to the eyes. ③ Footwear: Mid- to high-top hiking boots are recommended: warm, waterproof, and slip-resistant, effectively protecting ankles. Avoid ordinary sneakers in winter to prevent water ingress or slipping on ice.
6. Swimsuit: Swimsuits are required for the Blue Lagoon. Some hotels offer free public hot tubs (similar to small hot springs). If you plan to use the hot springs, please bring your own swimsuit and flip-flops.
7. Our company arranges professional Mandarin-speaking tour guides to provide Chinese-language explanations and communication throughout the trip. However, the guides do not provide guided tours inside attractions. For some attractions, a paid guided tour by a licensed local guide is required, subject to the guide's on-site arrangements.
